

Corsair 28RS

Aft Cockpit Sports Cruiser – 2012 Specifications

The Corsair 28RS has a much bigger cockpit than her EC and CR sisters. By eliminating the aft cabin, the 28RS is lighter and therefore faster – which is so much fun in the warmer climates where less cabin space is required.

Having said that, the main cabin has been carefully planned to still allow family cruising. The V-berth is ideal for one or two children and can certainly accommodate two adults. In addition, the settee area converts to two singles or an expansion of the V-berth.

As with the other Corsairs, the 28RS is an easily trailerable sport boat because of its lightweight and low profile on the trailer. The transition from trailering to sailing takes about 30 minutes. The mast is raised or lowered using the installed winch on the trailer. Everything about the Corsair 28RS is designed to get you on the water and across the water quickly, comfortably and affordably.

The base boat includes the following features:

- Electrical system with breaker panel, test meter, 12V accessory outlet and master switch, navigation, foredeck and cabin lights (does not include battery)
- Lightweight folding system
